Judy came to Japan from America to study Japanese culture last July. She has stayed at her uncle's house in Sapporo. Judy's uncle is very kind and friendly. She really enjoys her stay in Hokkaido.
One day Judy found a strange thing about her uncle. He was always wearing so old clothes. She asked him, "Why do you wear such old clothes?" He said, "Have you ever heard about the Ainu? The Ainu people think everything in the world has the "soul. So they take great care of everything around them and use things for a long time. I "was very impressed with their life. I've used my clothes for a long time."
Judy "became interested in the Ainu culture by [A] his words.
[B], Judy studied the Ainu language in the library. She was "surprised to know that many names of the cities and the places in Hokkaido come from the Ainu words. That night she [C] said to her uncle. He said to her, "That's right, Judy. People often use many Ainu words in Hokkaido." Then her uncle [D] her one important word "Irastarputte." The Ainu people use it like "Hello." It also means, "I want to know about you. May I "touch your heart?" Judy really likes the word because she thinks [E].
Judy is going to visit a new Ainu museum with her uncle next month. She is "looking forward to seeing the Ainu "dance and listening to the Ainu music there. She always says to her uncle, "I'm happy to know about the Ainu culture. I'll talk about it with my friends in Anzora. That's my dream."

You sometimes see people in wheelchairs on the "street. What do you think?
" [A] to help them?", "I'm glad because I can walk", or "Is our town really "safe and "comfortable for them?"
Three months ago, my brother had an "accident. He had to use a wheelchair for some weeks. I was very "worried about him. When I visited the hospital to see him, my brother could use a wheelchair to move. I "pushed his wheelchair because I wanted him to [B] comfortable. There were not any "barriers in the hospital. There were some "slopes, but [C] to go up and down the slopes. The hospital was good for "handicapped people.
Last week, I saw a girl in a wheelchair on the street. There was a small slope there. Many people there didn't "notice why she was worried. She couldn't move her wheelchair easily. I said to her, "Can I help you?" The girl said, "Thank you. I can't move my wheelchair." I pushed her wheelchair up the small slope. She thanked me and [D] away.
Then I (our town/that/more/be/thought/should) comfortable for handicapped people. There are many other barriers in our town. They are small ones for us, but some handicapped people are worried about them. For example, many people leave their bikes on the "path. If you can't see anything, you can't walk easily [E] in such places. So I want all the people in our town to think about handicapped people and what they can do to help them. I think about what I can do for them. We must think from "the point of view of "Live together."
What will you do to live together with handicapped people?

Today, I'm going to talk about Japanese language, especially for foreign people. Twenty-five years ago, Japan had a "disaster. Many foreign people had a hard time then because they did not understand "earnings and necessary "information in Japanese. Most of the words and "sentences were too difficult for them. Another way was needed to have communication in Japanese. Then, "sasashi nihongo was made to support foreign people in a disaster. Sasashi nihongo has rules. I will tell you some of them. You should choose necessary information from "various information sources. You should use easy words and make sentences short. You should not use too many "kanji when you write Japanese. Is it difficult for you to understand these rules?

These days sasashi nihongo begins to spread around you. At some hospitals, doctors use it. Sick foreign people can understand the things which they should do. It is used at some city halls, too. They give information about how to take trains and buses. The information is written in sasashi nihongo.

Some people say that the word "sasashi" of sasashi nihongo means two things. One is "easy" and the other is "kind." When you use it, foreign people around you can live in Japan easily. They will thank you for your kind "actions, too.

Now, you know a lot about sasashi nihongo. Let's use it for foreign people. You can do it.
